WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY IN ST. LOUIS

Vol. 16 No. 7/Oct. 10, 1991

Harold Wingood appointed dean of undergraduate admission

Harold M. Wingood, acting director of undergraduate admissions at Duke University in Durham, N.C., has been appointed dean of undergraduate admission at Washington University, effective spring 1992, Provost Edward S. Macias, Ph.D., has announced.

"As Washington University prepares to meet the academic challenges of the 21st century, Harold Wingood will be an invaluable asset," says Macias. "Universities across the country are confronted with the declining numbers of college-age individuals and competition for the best students will be keen. At the same time, the demographics of the U.S. population are changing, with African-Americans, Asians and Hispanics making up the majority of the population in a growing number of states.

Harold M. Wingood

"Washington University must be prepared to address the needs of America's changing population," adds Macias. "With his excellent credentials and extensive research on adapting college recruitment methods to various student populations, Harold Wingood will help Washington University continue to attract top quality students."

Wingood will succeed Gary M. Hochberg, Ph.D., interim dean of undergraduate admission and associate dean for the undergraduate program at the John M. Olin School of Business. Hochberg is serving as interim dean while continuing his business school duties. Macias expressed thanks to Hochberg, who he says is doing a "terrific job once again." Hochberg served in the same interim position during the 1988-89 academic year.

Wingood, a native of Lowell, Mass., was named acting director of undergraduate admissions at Duke University in May of this year. He previously was senior associate director of undergraduate admissions at Duke, a position he held for five years after joining the staff in 1986. He also has worked as an assistant and an associate director of undergraduate admissions at Tufts University in Medford, Mass., and as an admissions counselor at Babson College in Wellesley, Mass.

Wingood's professional and community affiliations include serving as a 1991-92 institutional representative to the College Board and membership in the National Association of College Admissions Officers and on the board of directors of the Volunteer Center of Greater Durham. He has been a panelist at numerous workshops on college admissions.

Wingood has a bachelor's degree in government and legal studies from Bowdoin College (1979) in Brunswick, Maine, and is pursuing a master's degree in liberal studies from Duke University.

In announcing Wingood's appointment, Macias also expressed thanks to the search committee. Robert L. Virgil, D.B.A., dean of the John M. Olin School of Business, was committee chair. The other committee members were: A. Van L. Brokaw, associate vice provost for marketing and strategic planning; William P. Darby, Ph.D., chair and professor, Department of Engineering and Policy; Dennis J. Martin, assistant provost and director of financial aid; James E. McLeod, chair of African and Afro-American Studies and adjunct associate professor of German; and Linda B. Salamon, Ph.D., dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Author, company president to give talks

West Indian author Jamaica Kincaid will deliver the keynote address for the 1991 Mr. and Mrs. Spencer T. Olin Conference at 11 a.m. Oct. 16 in Graham Chapel.

Later that day at 4 p.m., John E. Pepper, president of Procter & Gamble Co., will discuss the increasing significance of the company's global operations as he delivers the 13th annual Kellwood Lecture in Simon Hall's May Auditorium at the John M. Olin School of Business.

The lectures, which are part of the University's Assembly Series, are free and open to the public.

The Olin Conference, titled "Multicultural Perspectives of Women Writers," is co-presented by The Monticello College Foundation and Washington University. Kincaid will read from her work during the keynote address.

Born in St. John's, Antigua, in the West Indies, Kincaid is the author of four books. Her most recent is Lucy, the 1990 novel about a West Indian girl who arrives in New York City to work as an au pair, never having seen anything beyond her tropical island.

Kincaid received the Morton Dauwen Zabel Award of the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters in 1983 for her first book, At the Bottom of the River, a collection of short stories. Her book of interrelated stories, Annie John, received critical acclaim in 1985. A Small Place, published in 1988, was described by novelist Salman Rushdie as "a jeremiad of great clarity and a force that one might have called torrential were the language not so finely controlled."

Kincaid has been a staff writer for The New Yorker since 1978. Her stories have appeared in Rolling Stone and The Paris Review.

As part of the conference, Kincaid also will participate in a panel discussion on "Perspectives of Women Writers" at 2 p.m. Oct. 16 in the Women's Building lounge. A reception honoring the panel participants will be held from 4 to 5 p.m. in the lounge. The panel and reception are free and open to the public.

The panel also features Paula Gunn Allen, Ph.D., professor of English, University of California, Los Angeles; Ana Castillo, Ph.D., novelist and poet; and Jeanne Larsen, Ph.D., professor of English, Hollins College. Gerhild Scholz Williams, Ph.D., the University's associate provost and chair of the Department of Germanic Languages and Literatures, will moderate.

The conference honors the University's past and present recipients of the Olin Fellowship for Women. The fellowship was established by The Monticello College Foundation to bring outstanding women to Washington University to pursue careers in higher education or the professions.

The Lhamo Folk Opera of Tibet, which performs at 8 p.m. Oct. 25 and 26 in Edison Theatre, will showcase colorfully brocaded costumes, elaborate masks and headgear. As with Chinese folk opera, villains, heroes, fairies and monsters are readily identifiable through their costumes.

'Simply staggering'

Tibet folk opera transports audience with costumes, hypnotic music

The Lhamo Folk Opera of Tibet will use lavish traditional costumes, stylized and ritualized acting, and exotic music to bring the unusual, magical world of Tibetan folk tales to Edison Theatre at 8 p.m. Oct. 25 and 26.

The Lhamo, which is making its St. Louis debut, will present two different operas. On Oct. 25, the 35-member troupe will perform "Sugkyi Nyima," a Cinderella-type story about a fairy tale princess in dire straits; and on Oct. 26, the ensemble will perform "Pema Woebar," a tale about a merchant's young son and his adventures while searching for his father who has been sent on a futile mission by an evil king.

"The inspiration for booking this group came from the fact that they haven't toured since 1975," said Evy Warshawski, managing director of Edison Theatre. "It was particularly appropriate since this is the Year of Tibet and so many other events celebrating Tibet are taking place in St. Louis."

Tibetan folk opera has roots in both popular entertainment and religious ritual. Although these operas traditionally last from sunrise to sunset, the Lhamo performances at the Edison will be two hours each and feature a condensed version of each opera.

Intended for performance in bare outdoor settings, the stage has few props, but the eye is kept busy with the many colorfully brocaded and embroidered costumes and elaborate masks and headgear. As with Chinese folk opera, villains, heroes, fairies and monsters are readily identifiable through their costumes.

Many other elements of Tibetan folk opera are familiar to theatre-goers who have seen Chinese opera — movements are very stylized and stories include both serious drama and comic elements.

Most arresting, however, are the spectacular costumes, exotic headgear and masks, and the hypnotic music played on traditional Tibetan instruments — shell horns, long trumpets, lutes, drums and cymbals.

Anna Kisselgoff of The New York Times, says, "It is the yodel-type of vocalizing, the nasal quality for the women, the falsetto for some of the men, the holding of one note and the buildup of tension through this strange intoning that are simply staggering."

The Tibetan Folk Opera, based in the capital city of Lhasa, was one of four lhamos (folk operas) in Tibet prior to the 1959 invasion by the Chinese and the only group that emigrated to northern India with the Dalai Lama at that time. The Dalai Lama founded the Tibetan Dance and Drama Society in the north Indian town of Dharamsala in an effort to preserve the Tibetan tradition of performing arts. In 1975 the group gave its first international tour, which included more than 40 cities in the United States. This year's tour, which marks the International Year of Tibet, a worldwide awareness campaign about Tibet, includes 25 U.S. cities.

The Lhamo Folk Opera performance is part of Edison Theatre's "OVATIONS!" series, which presents a diverse selection of world-renowned performing arts events to the University community and the general public.

Tickets are $18 for the general public; $14 for senior citizens and Washington University faculty and staff; and $9 for students.

The Lhamo's appearance has been made possible in part by grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Regional Arts Commission, the Missouri Arts Commission and the Arts and Education Council of St. Louis.

John M. Olin School's fourth "Excellence in Business Award," an annual prize recognizing outstanding achievement in management.

Procter & Gamble, founded in 1837, remains one of America's most respected consumer product companies. Its brand names, such as Ivory, Charmin and Tide, have become part of American culture, and increasingly, the company is tapping new markets abroad. Pepper will discuss the development of "world brands."

In the last decade, Procter & Gamble doubled its foreign operations. It now operates facilities in 50 countries and distributes its products through grocers in 140 countries. More than 40 percent of its $24 billion in annual sales now occur outside the United States.

Eye Center seeks volunteers for study

The Department of Ophthalmology and Visual Sciences is searching for individuals to participate in a peripheral vision study. The study will evaluate new visual field testing methods. It consists of three examinations at the departmental offices, 7th floor, McMillan Building.

The study will include an ophthalmic examination and visual field tests. These tests are non-invasive and dilation of the eyes is not required. The study concludes the first week of November. Participants should be 21 years of age and have no significant eye disease or injury. People with glasses or contact lenses are eligible. Upon successful completion, participants will receive $50. For more information, call 362-EYES (3937) and ask for the visual fields study.

NOTABLES

Carolyn Baum, Elias Michael Director of the Program in Occupational Therapy, assistant professor in neurology, and director of Occupational Therapy at Irene Walter Johnson Rehabilitation Institute, along with Dorothy Farrar Edwards, Ph.D., assistant professor in occupational therapy, presented a minicourse in conjunction with eight other presenters at the 71st American Occupational Therapy Association Conference in Cincinnati. The presentation was titled "Assessing Adults: Functional Measures and Successful Outcomes." The course teaches participants how to administer and interpret five occupational therapy tools for assessment of adults. Baum also presented a scientific/technical session, titled "Planning Considerations: Community-based Care for Frail Elderly."

Robert W. Barczewski, associate business manager in the Department of Internal Medicine, and Linda D. Michelson, administrator of Reimbursement Services in the same department, co-authored an article, titled "Motivating Employees: An Incentive Program," published in a recent issue of the Medical Group Management Journal. The journal is a publication of the Medical Group Management Association, one of the largest organizations of its kind in the country.

Letha A. Chadiha, Ph.D., assistant professor of social work and adjunct assistant professor of anthropology, was awarded a $12,000 research planning grant from the National Science Foundation for the period of Aug. 15, 1991, through Jan. 31, 1993, titled "Sex Role Attitudes of Married and Unmarried African American Women." Chadiha will use a large national probability sample of blacks in order to examine the women's attitudes about work and family roles. A black feminist ideological perspective will be used as a theoretical framework to interpret the knowledge to be gained from this study.

Mary Ann Dzuback, Ph.D., assistant professor of education, was appointed to the editorial board of the History of Education Quarterly for a three-year term beginning in January 1992. She also is the program chair for Division F (history and historiography) of the American Educational Research Association's 1992 annual meeting. Dzuback recently finished serving on the program committee for the October 1991 annual meeting of the History of Education Society.

Dency Kahn, science/engineering librarian at Olin, was appointed to serve as a member of the American Library Association Science and Technology Section's Committee for the Comparison of Science/Technology Libraries.

Kristen E. Kaiser, a senior majoring in business administration, was selected by Beta Gamma Sigma Honor Society (BGS) to participate in the 1991 Richard D. Irwin/Beta Gamma Sigma National Seminar in October. Kaiser, ranked first in her class, will be fully sponsored by BGS to attend the seminar in Seattle, along with 35 similarly honored business school faculty and graduate/professional students. She was selected from a pool of nominees from 270 BGS chapters in the United States and Canada. The seminar is a highly interactive four-day learning experience, that covers a broad spectrum of topical business issues from globalization and corporate structure to business ethics. Kaiser has been designated a Richard D. Irwin Scholar for the 1991-1992 academic year.

Campus visitor: Chancellor William H. Danforth recently hosted a reception honoring Kunio Shimazu (center), New York president of Toyota Motor Corporate Services of North America. At left is Dan Kimura, Ph.D., associate professor of computer sciences. Also present were a number of other Toyota executives, including Robert W. Lloyd, president and chief executive officer, Bodine Aluminum Inc., St. Louis, a manufacturer of aluminum cast parts which Toyota recently acquired. The Bodine company has announced plans to build a $50 million plant in Troy, Mo., which will support Toyota's manufacturing facility in Georgetown, Ky. When completed in 1993, the factory will represent Toyota's first wholly owned engine plant in North America. Chancellor Danforth presented a gift to Shimazu commemorating his visit to Washington University.

Cathy J. Lazarus, M.D., director of the Medical Campus Student and Employee Health Service, and Marilyn Miller, employee health nurse, participated in the first Midwest conference of the Greater St. Louis Hospital Employee Health Nurses Association, held in St. Louis. Lazarus delivered a lecture on "Immunizations for Health Care Workers." Miller is president of the 50-member organization, which began eight years ago to promote continuing education, communication and fellowship among employee health nurses in the Missouri and Illinois area.

Marvin E. Levin, M.D., professor of clinical medicine, was chairman of the Diabetic Foot Conference at the 15th Symposium of the International Diabetes Federation Meeting, held in Washington, D.C. He gave a presentation on the diabetic foot at the Cleveland Clinic Foundation's Symposium, titled "New Directions in Vascular Medicine." He also lectured on diabetic vascular disease in the diabetic foot at the 37th annual meeting of the College of Family Physicians of Canada in Regina, Saskatchewan.

James McGarrell, professor of fine arts, has had a painting selected for a touring exhibition at five Japanese museums beginning in November. The 14-foot wide canvas is titled "Amphora Dopo la Cena."

NEWSMAKERS

Washington University faculty and staff make news around the globe. Following is a digest of media coverage they have received during recent weeks for their scholarly activities, research and general expertise.

Are cities obsolete? "The basic problem is that big cities are no longer functional," says Daniel Mandelker, J.S.D., Howard A. Stamper Professor of Law, in an article that appeared in the Sept. 9 issue of Newsweek.

Mandelker and other urban planning specialists believe big cities are obsolete because the transition to a service-based instead of an industry-based economy is leading to a new competition between large cities and their surrounding suburbs, a competition that threatens the cities' long-term viability. "A handful of cities — New York, San Francisco, maybe Boston — are redefining their roles. But the rest are losing their place in society. We don't need them anymore."
